We founded Business Forward on a simple idea: Washington needs to do a better job listening to business – and business needs to do a better job helping end Washington gridlock.

Today, through Business Forward, entrepreneurs, investors, small business owners and executives from across America are speaking out on ways to reform our immigration laws, reduce health care costs, simplify our tax laws, promote clean energy, protect our critical infrastructure, streamline regulations, boost exports, create more jobs and accelerate our economic recovery.

We brief local leaders on the issues they care about and help them share their advice with Congress and the White House. For those who want to do more, we help them write op-eds, speak with local media and organize other business leaders in their home markets. Through Business Forward, local business leaders have seen their recommendations reflected in three trade deals, the Jobs Act, the Affordable Care Act, and every Obama budget.
