BUSINESS LEADERS: TRANSFORM HIGH SCHOOL FOR THE FUTURE OF WORK
INTRODUCTION

Business Forward works with more than 100,000 business leaders across the U.S. We cover a range of issues, including education reform, health care, tax reform, trade, infrastructure, clean energy, intellectual property, and immigration. We organize local round-tables, Washington fly-ins, national conference calls, and training webinars. We also help business leaders work with local media, publish op-eds, and submit testimony to government agencies. More than 650 mayors, governors, Members of Congress, and senior Administration officials have participated in our briefings.

We recently asked our network to tell us what they think schools should be doing to prepare students for the future of work. Thousands of leaders responded, and several hundred provided personal statements or recommendations. This report outlines 10 common themes from these responses. We will produce further reports on many of these themes over the next year.

Business Forward has partnered in this work with XQ, the nation’s leading organization dedicated to reimagining high schools across America so every student succeeds—no matter their race, gender, or zip code. XQ has a community-led approach. Its national call to rethink high school inspired more than 10,000 people to join locally-led design teams. XQ offers free, open-source tools that every community can use to reimagine its high schools.
Business leaders understand the world is changing. High schools must produce “future ready” graduates because technologies like automation and AI are making it harder for people without high-level skills to find jobs that pay well enough to support a family.

Too many high school students aren’t graduating, and too many of those who do graduate aren’t ready for college or a career. These challenges are real in communities all over the United States – in big cities and small ones, rural areas and suburbs.

Changing education in the ways we’ve tried in the past won’t be enough. We must transform our high schools for the future of work. We must give teachers the tools they need and make high school diplomas meaningful again. Business leaders can help – by learning about the challenges schools face, speaking out in support of innovative schools, and developing collaborative training and internship programs.

As employers and active members of their communities, business leaders care deeply about high schools. What is important when it comes to redesigning schools for the future of work? Business leaders recommend:

1. Transform high schools for the modern world.
2. Combine academics with practical skills for real-world success.
3. Involve employers in transforming high schools.
4. Hold high schools to higher standards.
5. Give teachers the tools they need to succeed.
6. Provide flexibility to forward-thinking schools.
7. Keep students interested, not bored.
8. Personalize education to match students’ interests and needs.
10. Build on each community’s unique assets.

Business Forward and XQ are encouraging Governors to make high schools a priority. They can do that by offering incentives to design schools of the future, promoting the “innovation” status that allows high schools to try new approaches, and using pilot programs to seed innovation.
Business leaders want high schools designed intentionally for the modern world. A high school diploma should mean a graduate is prepared for the jobs and careers of the future.

“The school system of today is preparing our children for the economy of yesterday or, if they are lucky, the economy of today.”
- SHAHZAD BHATTI

“We need more innovation and a forward-thinking curriculum. The schools need to be totally transformed.”

“Tech education should be found throughout the USA in every high school curriculum.”
- DAN LUBAR

“The future of our nation depends on the success of our children. When we prepare them for success, we prepare our nation for success.”
- BEVIN CALLAN

“The standard system is lacking in foresight and the ability to actually prep kids for a sustainable life, not just college or a job.”
- SCOTT O’SHAUGHNESSY
OWNER, GOAT LOCKER REAL ESTATE, PORT ORCHARD, WA

“It’s important to redesign high schools in my state by preparing all youngsters, including the ones attending urban city schools, so that they in return will be able to acquire the necessary skills needed to thrive in a technological field and workforce.”
- ADRA YOUNG
DIRECTOR, ARDANNYL, GARY, IN
Too many schools are preparing young people for jobs that won’t exist in the near future. Instead, schools need to embrace technology, innovation and collaboration skills that will be in even greater demand. Students need real-world skills, including teamwork and problem-solving, as well as fundamental skills like reading, writing and math.

I wish there were more work opportunities within the school system and resources for the students like skill centers (car, media, nursing, carpentry, arts, design, etc.). We need to increase the skills centers and opportunities for hands-on, project-based learning in our schools.

It would be nice if high school students were given the opportunity to learn the basics of everyday life. For example, they should be taught to balance a checkbook, pay their bills, and work with a budget to live in the manner they can afford.

Business needs well-educated citizens who can function in teams, generate new ideas and approaches, embrace competition, and participate in their communities. Business leaders want to be involved in efforts to transform high schools to prepare students for the future of work. They want to learn more about the challenges schools face, speak out in support of innovative schools and develop collaborative training and internship programs.

We should allow children to focus earlier on the skills they need as opposed to general projects/courses which take a lot of time but will not help them one iota when they leave school. Encourage more flexible teaching so that business leaders in the community are invited to teach certain skills or knowledge in the vocational areas which appeal to children.

I believe we as business owners should assist in the development of the skills we need for our businesses.

The business community should get more involved in ensuring that the local schools prepare local students for local jobs rather than always looking to recruit from out of area.

We need more collaboration between businesses and the school through internships which are managed through the schools. The schools look to the businesses to support their organizations but offer little support in wanting to hear about real issues such as students having poor retail math skills and communication skills.

It matters to me that the curriculum is meaningful and applicable to the job market. Plenty of hands-on experience should be utilized in the classroom. Mentoring programs should be created and utilized. Sponsor Q & A sessions with people from all levels of different occupations.

Market-driven reforms should include better alignment and partnerships with businesses in different industries. Also, I would like to see strong internships and job shadows for 11 and 12 grades.

By working with large companies or mom-and-pop businesses, students will be exposed to what is out in the world. Summer internship for a week or a weekend may open students’ eyes to many different avenues of the future for them.
Business leaders believe in accountability. They want to hold high schools to higher standards.

It is important for the business community to support increased accountability for student and school performance.

I see just how much these institutions have suffered in my state since I attended them. A good education should prepare students for the world they will be entering upon graduation, whether that includes further education or joining the work force.

Business leaders support teachers. They deserve better preparation and access to more high-quality learning tools and resources.

“Teachers need to be praised for working so hard for the students. Teachers are treated poorly and paid poorly.”
- CAROLE EHRHARDT
RETIRED EDUCATOR, DOUGLAS RANCH CAMP, PEBBLE BEACH, CA

“We can’t expect the 21st century teachers and students to teach, learn and go forward in this new and technical society while dealing and working with 20th century schools, equipment and teaching aids! We can’t lead or produce the world’s future leaders by educating or teaching under yester-years’ conditions and methods!”
- RON L. HUBBARD
V.P./G.M., B&R SALES & MARKETING CONSULTING GROUP, JASPER, TN

We should provide higher salaries for teachers. We should be finding new methods to reach into high school students’ potential, such as a broader scope of activities. For example, art and music classes, intramural sports, and qualified counselors to help those who are struggling.

“The district is losing quality teachers to other districts that have improved their budgets and classroom capacity.”
- RICHARD RUEL
CHAIRMAN, METRO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, EAST SAINT LOUIS, IL

“We should provide quality teachers and support staff that will serve all students. The curriculum must provide relevant information that directs students to available employment fields.”
- JOHN DELGADO
DIVISION OFFICER, CALIFORNIA RETIRED TEACHERS ASSOC, SAN MARTIN, CA

Not enough money gets in the classroom for teachers.
- MICHAEL KELLY
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, THE LOS ANGELES COALITION FOR THE ECONOMY & JOBS, LOS ANGELES, CA

It’s all about the teacher: hire the best and pay them well.
- KRIS STADELMAN

We should provide quality teachers and support staff that will serve all students. The curriculum must provide relevant information that directs students to available employment fields.

Teachers are underpaid, materials continue to be a challenge and it appears to be the first on the chopping block at budget time.

“Give teachers the tools they need to succeed.”

“The district is losing quality teachers to other districts that have improved their budgets and classroom capacity.”
Local education innovators often run into rules and regulations that stop them from transforming education. Give communities, schools, and teachers the flexibility to innovate based on sound ideas—and an agreement to be held accountable for getting results.

Surveys show that most high school students are bored, unchallenged, and unengaged. Business leaders know that students who are bored are not learning well. They want to help schools find ways for students to be challenged with hands-on projects and real-world learning outside the classroom.

[Our school system attempted] to use quality control measures used in manufacturing as their model. The problem was that the widget was the child in the model and the customer was the future employer. I believe this would have been better had they understood the child to be the customer.

- CATHERINE TROST-STEFFEN

I moved our grandchildren to a private school as they were bored, doing little and their teachers were not good. Our grandson at age 11 mentioned that he loved being challenged in the new school.

- CAROLE EHRHARDT

I myself was barely able to stay awake in high school so I rarely went 50 years ago, but when I got to college, I found out you could learn a lot, so I got an AA, a BS and an MBA from Johns Hopkins. Let’s make high school interesting.

Business leaders believe it is important to support the overall development of students as much as possible, and that won’t work with a “one size fits all” approach. Students have different interests and challenges. Some students need extra support to prepare for college, a career and life as an adult.

If we are to thrive in the 21st Century...we need to educate 100% of what it means to be human.

Business leaders know that strong career preparation programs and work-based learning experiences give high school students a leg up on real-world success. Employers want to partner with schools to give students opportunities to learn in workplace settings outside the classroom.

We need more community participation from businesses, both privately owned and corporations, large and small. I used to run a College and Career Day Event and students entered fields (like actuaries) that they never would have if not for this event. It was priceless to students!

Every community is different, and there is no one-size-fits-all approach to creating future-ready schools. Business leaders want communities to be able to transform high schools in ways that address local challenges and take advantage of unique local assets.
