MICHIGAN BUSINESS LEADERS: WE CAN’T COMPETE IF WE CAN’T GET ALONG
In today’s economy, communities compete with one another to attract new talent and investment. They compete with their schools, workforce, and infrastructure. They also compete with the strength of their community.

Winning states grow and create new jobs, which pay for better schools, roads, and parks. New investment attracts more new investment, and so on. On the other hand, states that fail to bring in new investment can spiral as their shrinking economy causes young workers to move away.

For years, business leaders in Michigan have shared a simple, powerful point with their employees, suppliers, customers, and neighbors: We cannot compete if we cannot get along. We need to work together, respect one another, protect one another, and bring out the best in one another.

The 2020 election will be among the most contentious in recent history. It’s okay for citizens of good faith to disagree strongly, but we must commit ourselves to protecting the most vulnerable among us -- and we must reject those trying to divide us.

This report features comments, recommendations, and advice on diversity, inclusion, and tolerance from many of Michigan’s most successful business leaders, as well as the CEOs of Fortune 500 companies operating here. Some relate to recent events, like the murder of George Floyd. Others relate to the “Detroit Civility Project,” an effort to encourage an open dialogue across the business community. And some relate directly to comments made by President Trump.

If we work together, Michigan can compete with anybody.
The sad and tragic truth is that many Americans continue to face deeply rooted discrimination and unconscionable violence due to the color of their skin... At Ally, we believe racial injustice and inequity must be actively recognized, confronted, and addressed – not just today, but in all the days ahead. We do this by coming together, having hard conversations, and celebrating our differences... Violence will never be condoned and only serves to further the pain.

We’re an energy company, but we’re also 10k people from Michigan and 24 other states who stand united against discrimination and violence. We encourage everyone to open doors and build bridges of understanding to make historical change now.

We know that hate, bias and racial division all remain woven into the fabric of our society, and we condemn these actions in the strongest of terms. We stand together with our family, friends, colleagues and neighbors to fight for change... I’m committing to act on behalf of those who deal with racism, bigotry, and the threat of violence everyday...

We do not tolerate discrimination, believe all individuals should be greeted with respect; and speak up when we see behaviors that don’t match our values... We must fight the scourge of racism and discrimination at the same time we are battling the health and economic impact of COVID-19, which has also disproportionately impacted the black community.

For Bronson to live up to our mission, we must first acknowledge that racism is not just a problem for African Americans. Racism is everyone’s problem because it erodes the very fabric of our society... As this region’s largest employer and leading healthcare system, Bronson unequivocally condemns racism, bigotry, discrimination and violence.

MICHIGAN BUSINESSES CONDEMN HATE & VIOLENCE...
We as Americans must demand more of ourselves and our culture to stop this social injustice that continues to plague our country... On behalf of our executive leadership team, please know that we stand in support of racial equality... Our goal is to hold ourselves to the highest standards of ethical behavior and demonstrate our core values of respect, accountability and teamwork - not just in times of crisis but every day.

We are in this together, and it’s up to all of us to make the world a better place. We are committed to working together with our colleagues, customers, and partners to do our part to bring change. We encourage everyone to embrace compassion, empathy, and courage.

- ALTAIR ENGINEERING
  TROY, MI

These are challenging times and understandably, many of us are feeling the weight of the events of the past few months... Our company’s legacy is founded on the belief that our purpose is to enrich lives in the communities we serve. Core to that purpose, we stand against racism and inequality. We have always believed that all people are equal and deserve to be treated with dignity and respect... We also support our communities experiencing social and civil unrest, and stand with them in this time of need and uncertainty.

- RICK KEYES
  CEO, MEIJER
  GRAND RAPIDS, MI

We will always speak up against inequality and racism. We stand with the Black community and condemn all acts of brutality and violence. We’re committed to the communities we serve and pledge to help create long-term solutions. We recognize we have more work to do, and we must - all of us - with a unified voice - take actions to stamp out disparate treatment, bias and inequity.

- KELLY SERVICES
  TROY, MI

We reject racism. We believe in inclusivity, equality and justice for all. We stand in solidarity with our employees and our communities who rightfully - and righteously - demand change. We honor the Black community by committing to be part of that change, not just when the world is watching, but when the cameras are off, and the hashtags stop trending, by making ally-ship and inclusion moral imperatives at Valassis.

- VALASSIS
  LIVONIA, MI

We as Michigan businesses condemn hate & violence. It’s imperative that we stand in solidarity together with our colleagues, customers, and partners to work collectively to address systemic racism and iniquity. It is necessary for us to work together to bring about long-term solutions to help create a more inclusive, equal and just society for all.

As we try to begin our return to what is “normal” we must realize that “normal” is full of injustice, hatred and racism. Returning to “normal” isn’t good enough. We can do better. We must do better.

Incivility has become a cost of doing business... Generational differences, the effect of technology on how we communicate, lack of self-awareness, and discomfort with difference are really the factors feeding into real or perceived incivility.

AN INCLUSIVE WORKPLACE IS A COMPETITIVE Advantage

“At Dow, we lead with inclusion because without an inclusive workplace, diversity is just a numbers game instead of being a powerful force for Dow winning in the marketplace.”

- DOW CHEMICAL COMPANY

“We are all stronger — as a company, as professionals, as people — when we have a diverse and inclusive workforce that values everyone’s unique perspective and insight.”

- GERRY ANDERSON, CEO OF DTE ENERGY

“Diverse teams outperform non-diverse teams — every time.”

- PLANTE-MORAN

“I am a huge believer in diversity and inclusion because it is the right way to grow an organization and treat people. It leads to better business results and most importantly it will help us achieve our mission of making health care better.”

- KEVIN LOBO, CEO OF STRYKER

33 COMPANIES HEADQUARTERED IN MICHIGAN HAVE COMMITTED TO CEO ACTION’S PLEDGE:

“As leaders of some of America’s largest corporations, we manage thousands of employees and play a critical role in ensuring that inclusion is core to our workplace culture and that our businesses are representative of the communities we serve. Moreover, we know that diversity is good for the economy; it improves corporate performance, drives growth and enhances employee engagement. Simply put, organizations with diverse teams perform better.”

CASE STUDY: DETROIT CIVILITY PROJECT

Launched in 2019, the Detroit Civility Project is a partnership between the Detroit Chamber of Commerce and journalists Nolan Finley and Stephen Henderson. The project encourages shared conversations and resources amongst people with different backgrounds. When people learn more about each other, it’s much more likely they’re willing to see the other’s perspective. At the end of the day, that ability to effectively work together drives economic competitiveness in Michigan.23

Given the progress Michigan and Detroit have made in recent years — and how much remains to be accomplished — we cannot afford to follow the example of incivility that grips much of our national dialogue. The continuation and acceleration of Michigan’s progress is dependent upon all of us working together, finding common ground and handling our inevitable disagreements with humility and grace.

- SANDY K. BARUAH
CEO, DETROIT REGIONAL CHAMBER

Racism and inequality are very bad for business, for the economy. There’s a cost for all of us... in terms of economic prosperity and progress, along with human relationships and the damage it’s doing to people... It will benefit [business]; this isn't altruism, this is something that has to be done.

- NOLAN FINLEY

Nolan and I are really committed to the idea that no matter what the idea is, how offensive it might be to the other person, we can have this conversation and do it in a way that is productive and leads to solutions. The civility project is all about that.

As the events of the last week have unfolded here in the U.S., it is clear that we need to collectively stand together and denounce the politics of hate, intolerance and racism. The values that are the cornerstone of our culture: tolerance, diversity, empathy and trust, must be reaffirmed by our actions every day.

America’s leaders must honor our fundamental values by clearly rejecting expressions of hatred, bigotry, and group supremacy... As CEO of Merck and as a matter of personal conscience, I feel a responsibility to take a stand against intolerance and extremism.

I have already made clear my abhorrence at the recent hate-spawned violence in Charlottesville, and earlier today I called on all leaders to condemn the white supremacists and their ilk who marched and committed violence...

There would be no GE without people of all races, religions, genders, and sexual orientations. GE has no tolerance for hate, bigotry, racism, and the white supremacist extremism that the country witnessed in Charlottesville last weekend.

Racism and murder are unequivocally reprehensible and are not morally equivalent to anything else that happened in Charlottesville... I believe the President should have been -- and still needs to be -- unambiguous on that point.

In the aftermath, more than 30 CEOs from major companies resigned from or voted to disband 2 White House advisory panels.
CASE STUDY: BUSINESS ROUNDTABLE

The Business Roundtable (BRT) is a nonpartisan national trade group that generally supports conservative policies. The group recently issued a statement calling for unity and urgent action against inequities. BRT Chairman and Walmart CEO Doug McMillion established a special committee to advance racial equity and justice.

Over the past few days, I have watched with a heavy heart the violence, unrest and national outcry to end race-based injustice. …Having spoken to many CEOs of America’s leading businesses, I know they share my conviction that this is a time to act to address racial inequality… Business Roundtable CEOs do not have all of the answers. But we are committed to doing our part to listen, learn and to use our collective influence and scale to advance racial justice and equal opportunity for all Americans.

- DOUG MCMILLION
CEO, WALMART

As the employers of more than 15 million individuals of all backgrounds, whose diversity strengthens our institutions, Business Roundtable CEOs are deeply concerned about the racial bias that continues to plague our society. At a time of great uncertainty, when communities of color are facing deep inequities, now is a time for unity and justice. We call on national, local and civic leaders to take urgent, thoughtful action to prevent future tragedies and to help our communities heal.

Time To Vote

“Time To Vote is a nonpartisan movement, led by the business community, to contribute to the culture shift needed to increase voter participation in our country’s elections.”

This campaign isn’t about any particular party or candidate or issue – it’s about encouraging more people to vote without having to make the hard choice between going to work and going to the polls.

- CHIP BERGH
  PRESIDENT AND CEO OF LEVI STRAUSS & CO.

Demonstrating your company’s commitment to voting reinforces the idea that American businesses can protect our democracy. I have been heartened to see business leaders from every corner of the country and across a range of industries prioritizing the health of our democracy and I look forward to seeing this movement grow.
